About This Game

Play

A hex based farming game with a twist. Set in a dystopian future where farming on earth is nearly impossible, you must take to the stars to grow food for humanity.

After landing on a remote planet you are given a biodome, a tractor, and a couple of tools. You will need to manage the land, grow crops, and make a profit.

Grow

As your space colony grows, new crops will become available. From modified but familiar fruit and vegetables from Earth, to new and exotic vegetation native to your new planet. Even try your hand at building a forestry.

Expand

When you grow your crop, adventurers will arrive to join your colony. Reach a high enough population and you will be able to build new habitats and research facilities, and in return you will be rewarded with access to the resources the expansion has to offer. Maintaining a space colony isn't easy; colonists will give you requests and if you can't provide for them then some may leave.

Discover

You will discover some new tools and equipment to help you along the way:

- Watering cans and sprinklers will let you water your crops;
- Lights will help you see at night;
- Chainsaws will let you cut down trees;
- And more...

great game really fun to play. Nice graphics and fun gameplay. Recommended. \ud83d\udc4d Looking forward to seeing the updates.. Well I played this for a while.

I used to be an avid keyboard gamer but I felt this would be a lot easier with a controller.

It is still in EA currently but this has everything going for it.

If there was multiplayer online in it that;d be cool too.

The developers of this game should have known better than to put this up in its current state. I understand Early Access, a good half of the titles in my 274 game library are probably Early Access, but this game comes nowhere near to the same level of completion you'd expect for a title being pushed for $10. This is a bare bones alpha build with non-existent game play. You heard it here folks; you're basically paying for a tech demo.

There isn't much of anything (if anything) to do. You can purchase a few things from the shop, kick them around with your forklift, and that's about it. As far as I could tell, there is no way to plant any of the seeds you buy. They materialize on the street, instead of being placed into some kind of inventory, primed and ready for a rousing game of truck soccer.

If this game was marketed as Truck Soccer, it would have been a lot more honest but, then again, I wouldn't have bought it. Hold off on this one until more work has been done. It's a good concept but right now that's all it is.. great game really fun to play. Wow. Wow. Wow. Wow. The developers of this game should have known better than to put this up in its current state.
